Tooth Hints!

"When ought we to go to the Dentist?"

Many think it unnecessary to devote particular attention to the teeth until the mouth is affected by broken or decayed teeth. Others give their teeth no attention until pain compels them. Every one who thinks a moment on the subject knows that we cannot masticate our food satisfactory, if one of the teeth is tender, inflamed or other wise out of order, and that if this be the case, the mouth requires immediate attention.

FIRST KISS WAS IN INDIA

Yale Professor Discovers That the Delightful Custom Originated in the Far East.

Almost everything of value has had its beginning in the far east. There civilization started; there government was first established; there religion, philosophy and poetry were born; and printing, gunpowder and the mariner's compass were there given to mankind. Now comes a learned professor from Yale who tells of still another claim which the east has on us for undying admiration and gratitude. His profound ethnological studies and investigation into the social customs of bygone ages disclose the fact that kissing was discovered in India. He has unearthed an epic poem of ancient India which treats of love and which tells of the first kiss. It was, needless to say, the invention of lovely woman. The poet says "she laid her mouth to my mouth and made a noise which gave me pleasure." There we have it complete!—the culmination of long ages of yearning for something undefined and unrealized, given life by the genius of a woman inspired by love, and coming into being like Minerva from the head of Jove, full grown from her lips. Other things born into the world have been added to and improved on in the course of time, or have grown stale and been flung aside. The kiss remains as airy and evanescent, as impalpable and elusive, as blissful and ineffable, as precious to man as was the first one those long ages ago, when the Indian maiden laid her mouth to her lover's, and he responded with a thrill of pleasure to the new-born caress.

MACKEREL IN TROUT BROOK?

Clerk's Error Made an Unsuccessful English Angler do a Lot of Explaining.

A story is related of a fisherman who tried to lure the dainty trout from some of the nearby brooks. It would not do to name the fisherman here, for it might cost him something. Anyway, the fisherman did not get a bite in the brooks. He drove back to town rather disheartened, and went to a restaurant to get something to eat. He asked the restaurant keeper if he had any trout, and received an affirmative reply. He ordered some of the trout for his supper, and then told the proprietor that he might put two or three of the uncooked fish in his fish basket out at the door, as he didn't care to go home and receive the rail-lery of his friends. The proprietor of the restaurant told one of the clerks to carry out the order, and it was supposed to have been done faithfully.

But the clerk was not very alert, and when the fisherman got home and opened up the fish basket to his astonished wife, there reposed two mackerel, and the fisherman has not got through explaining yet.

CUTTING BY ELECTRICITY.

In some parts of the French forests a platinum wire kept at a white heat by an electric current has been employed instead of a saw for felling trees. It is claimed that by this plan a tree can be felled in one-eighth of the time required by the old sawing method. The entire absence of sawdust and the beneficial effect of the slight carbonization of the ends of the cut timber in preserving the wood are reckoned as decided advantages.
